HATIN' BP: a new global pastime

A three-sided model of personal health

The economic crisis, the second global war, the rise of the consumer and the weather's wild ways have, according to one measure, arrived at the perfect storm for the current model of personal health. The new model, so-called, is called the "Three-Sided Model of Personal Health." It has three sides: emotional, physical, and psychological. The emotional side is represented by the "Red Triangle," which includes feelings of anger, anxiety, and fear. The physical side is represented by the "Blue Triangle," which includes symptoms of fatigue, pain, and illness. The psychological side is represented by the "Yellow Triangle," which includes thoughts of worry, doubt, and fear.
